Mini-split systems have little-to-no ducts, so they avoid the energy losses associated with the ductwork of central forced air systems. Duct losses can account for more than 30% of energy consumption for space conditioning, especially if the ducts are in an unconditioned space such as an attic or basement.

Like any air conditioner, mini split air conditioner power is measured in BTUs. The greater the number of BTUs, the more area in your home it can cool. Some manufacturers actually list the size of the area that a unit can cover. This makes it easier to choose a model, but it helps to have an idea of how many BTUs are necessary to cover a particular room size.
